

TEMPLATE PACK

The Weekly War Plan: A 7-Day Faith Accountability Template

Stop drifting. Start fighting. A structured system for real spiritual accountability.

The Solution Engine · June 2026

Stop drifting. Start fighting. A structured system for real spiritual accountability.

What's Inside

- A complete 7-day tracking template that maps your daily high-risk windows so you and your partner can anticipate temptation before it hits
- Structured weekly check-in prompts that move the conversation past small talk into honest, faith-rooted accountability
- Sections for recording spiritual victories, honest failures, and specific prayer requests so nothing important gets skipped
- Compatible with both Christian and Muslim accountability practices — built on shared values of repentance, discipline, and devotion to God

The Weekly War Plan: A 7-Day Faith Accountability Template

HOW THIS PACK WORKS

The weekly rhythm:

| Day | Template Used |

|---|---|

| Sunday | Weekly Intention Sheet |

| Monday–Thursday | Evening Audit (nightly, ~3 min) |

| Wednesday | Mid-Week Check-In Script (with partner) |

| Friday or Sunday | Weekly Review Scorecard |

| Ongoing | Reward & Consequence Declaration (set once, revisit weekly) |

What you'll need:

- A printer or a notes app you'll actually open
- An accountability partner — one person who has agreed to be honest with you
- 3 minutes each night and 15 minutes on Wednesday
- The willingness to write true things about yourself, not aspirational things

A note on faith language: This pack was designed for both Christian and Muslim practitioners. Where relevant, prompts are written with dual-tradition awareness. Use the language of your own tradition — salah or prayer, tawbah or repentance, nafs or flesh, the Holy Spirit or taqwa — these are your words. The structure belongs to everyone. The vocabulary belongs to you.

TEMPLATE 1: SUNDAY WEEKLY INTENTION SHEET

Set Before the Week Moves You

How to use this template:

Fill this out every Sunday — before the week starts, not after it's already in motion. Budget 10–15 minutes. Do it after your morning prayer or devotional, while your head is clear. This is the most important template in the pack. Everything else in the week flows from what you decide here. If you skip this, the rest of the system loses its foundation.

The point of this sheet is not to make you feel hopeful about the coming week. It is to make you specific about it. Vague intentions produce vague results. You are identifying exactly where you are most likely to fail — the day, the time, the emotional state — before it arrives.

SUNDAY WEEKLY INTENTION SHEET

Week of: [DATE — write the full date, e.g., January 12]

Week number in this system: [1 / 2 / 3 / 4]

SECTION A: Where I Am Coming From

In 2–3 honest sentences, describe where you ended last week spiritually. Not what you wish were true. What is true.

Last week, spiritually, I would describe myself as: [FILL IN — e.g., "Distracted. I missed Fajr three times and spent too much time on my phone late at night, which is always when I'm most vulnerable to the temptation I keep confessing."]

The one word that best describes the condition I'm bringing into this week is: [FILL IN — e.g., tired / fragile / steadier / defensive / ashamed / hungry for God]

SECTION B: This Week's Primary Battle

Name the specific sin, habit, or spiritual weakness you are actively fighting this week. Not in vague terms. Be precise.

The specific thing I am fighting this week is: [FILL IN — e.g., "pornography," "losing my temper with my spouse," "skipping Dhuhr and Asr because I'm at work," "numbing with food when I'm stressed," "bitterness toward my coworker"]

This matters to my faith because: [FILL IN — e.g., "My body is a trust from God and I am violating that trust," or "I cannot lead my family in prayer while living in secret sin"]

SECTION C: The Three High-Risk Windows

This is the core of the Intention Sheet. You are identifying, in advance, the three specific moments this week where you are most likely to fall. Think about last week. Think about your patterns. Be honest about times, places, triggers, and emotional states.

High-Risk Window #1

- The specific time/day this is likely to happen: [FILL IN — e.g., "Tuesday night after 10pm when my spouse is asleep and I'm still on my phone"]
- The emotional state that will precede it: [FILL IN — e.g., "Boredom, loneliness, the feeling that I worked hard and deserve to relax"]
- The physical location or device involved: [FILL IN — e.g., "My phone, in bed, in the dark"]

-
- My pre-decided response when this moment arrives: [FILL IN — e.g., "Phone goes on the charger in the kitchen at 9:30pm. If I feel the pull before then, I text my accountability partner one word: 'now.' Then I make wudu/wash my face and read one page of Quran or Psalms out loud."]

High-Risk Window #2

- The specific time/day this is likely to happen: [FILL IN — e.g., "Thursday lunch break when I'm eating alone and feeling overlooked at work"]
- The emotional state that will precede it: [FILL IN — e.g., "Resentment, self-pity, a feeling that no one sees the effort I'm making"]
- The physical location or device involved: [FILL IN — e.g., "My phone in the break room, looking at social media, comparing myself"]
- My pre-decided response when this moment arrives: [FILL IN — e.g., "Leave my phone in my car during lunch. Bring a physical book. Recite Surah Al-Kahf verse 10 or Psalm 46:1 until the feeling shifts."]

High-Risk Window #3

- The specific time/day this is likely to happen: [FILL IN — e.g., "Sunday evening, when the week feels like it's over and accountability feels further away"]
- The emotional state that will precede it: [FILL IN — e.g., "Relief that the week is done, lowered guard, 'I made it this far' reasoning"]
- The physical location or device involved: [FILL IN — e.g., "Home alone, laptop open, no structure"]
- My pre-decided response when this moment arrives: [FILL IN — e.g., "Schedule something social or productive for Sunday evenings. This is when I complete next week's Intention Sheet — that act alone closes the loophole."]

SECTION D: This Week's One Spiritual Commitment

Choose ONE specific spiritual discipline you will prioritize above all others this week. Not three. One.

This week, my non-negotiable spiritual practice is: [FILL IN — e.g., "Every Fajr prayer, on the mat, before I look at my phone" or "Daily 10-minute Scripture reading before 8am"]

If I miss it, I will: [FILL IN — e.g., "Complete it within the same day, before sunset, and note it in my Evening Audit"]

SECTION E: What I'm Asking God For This Week

Write a one-sentence prayer or intention for the week. In your own voice. Not a formula.

[FILL IN — e.g., "Allah, I am weak in this specific place. I am bringing You this week before it happens, asking You to be strong where I am not." Or: "Lord, I'm tired of confessing this same thing. This week I am not relying on willpower. I am asking You to intercept me before I get to that moment."]

TEMPLATE 2: EVENING AUDIT (NIGHTLY MICRO-TEMPLATE)

4 Questions. 3 Minutes. Every Night.

How to use this template:

Complete this every night, Monday through Saturday (Sunday's reflection is rolled into the Weekly Intention Sheet and Scorecard). Do it at a consistent time — most people find right after Isha prayer or right before bed works best. Do not do this in your head. Write it down. Written honesty is harder to rationalize than mental honesty. This takes 3 minutes if you're focused and honest. It takes 20 minutes if you're trying to make yourself sound better than you were.

Print 6 copies per week, or keep a running notes file. The goal is a written record you can bring to your Wednesday check-in.

EVENING AUDIT

Date: [DAY, DATE]

Day of week: [Mon / Tue / Wed / Thu / Fri / Sat]

Question 1: Spiritual Wins

What went right today, spiritually? Be specific. "I was good" is not an answer.

Today I: [FILL IN — e.g., "Prayed all five prayers on time, including getting up for Fajr even though I was exhausted." Or: "Felt the urge to gossip about my coworker and stopped myself, said a prayer for them instead." Or: "Opened my Bible before my phone this morning for the first time this week."]

Question 2: Near-Misses

Did you come close to the sin or habit you're fighting? What happened? If you fell, write that here instead — honestly and without soft language.

Today I: [FILL IN — e.g., "Almost opened the app at 11pm. Picked up my phone, got as far as unlocking it, then remembered my Wednesday check-in and put it down. Got up and made tea instead." Or: "I fell. I watched for about 20 minutes before closing it. I felt the familiar shame. I'm writing this before I rationalize it into something smaller than it was."]

Question 3: Prayers / Devotionals

Account for your spiritual obligations honestly. No rounding up.

- ☐ Morning prayer/devotional: Completed / Missed / Partial — [brief note if needed]
- ☐ Midday prayer/devotional: Completed / Missed / Partial / N/A for my tradition
- ☐ Afternoon prayer: Completed / Missed / Partial / N/A
- ☐ Evening prayer: Completed / Missed / Partial / N/A
- ☐ Night prayer: Completed / Missed / Partial / N/A
- ☐ Scripture reading / Quran recitation: Completed / Missed / Pages or verses: [FILL IN]

Question 4: Emotional State

Rate your emotional state today and name the dominant feeling. Emotional states are the early-warning system for spiritual vulnerability.

Today my emotional state was (circle or write): Stable / Anxious / Angry / Lonely / Tired / Grateful / Peaceful / Discouraged / Proud / Numb

The dominant feeling was: [FILL IN — e.g., "Loneliness. My wife and I had a surface-level evening and I went to bed feeling unseen. This is historically my most dangerous state."]

Note to carry to Wednesday: [FILL IN anything from today you need to tell your accountability partner — or write "nothing significant" if that's true]

TEMPLATE 3: MID-WEEK CHECK-IN SCRIPT

A Structured 10-Question Conversation Guide for Wednesday Accountability Meetings

How to use this template:

This script is for use with your accountability partner every Wednesday. It works in person, by phone, or by voice message. It does not work by text — text allows too much editing and too much softening. You or your partner reads each question aloud. The other person answers. Then you switch.

The goal is not to have a good conversation. The goal is to have an honest one. A good conversation that avoids the real thing is not accountability — it is friendship with religious vocabulary. Both are valuable; only one of them keeps you from repeating next week what you're confessing this week.

Time budget: 15 minutes maximum. Use a timer. When you both know the clock is running, you answer faster and more honestly. If you regularly run over 15 minutes, something other than accountability is happening in the conversation.

Print or share this script with your partner before your first session. They need to know the questions before Wednesday so they come prepared to answer them honestly too. Accountability works in both directions.

MID-WEEK CHECK-IN SCRIPT

Date: [Wednesday, DATE]

Partners present: [YOUR NAME] + [PARTNER NAME]

Meeting format: In person / Phone call / Voice message

Partner A asks Partner B all 10 questions first. Then switch. Total time per person: ~7 minutes.

Question 1 — The Honest Opening

"On a scale of 1–10, how spiritually strong do you feel right now, today, in this moment — not compared to who you want to be, compared to where you actually are?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — write your number and one sentence explanation: e.g., "6. I've kept my commitments but I feel like I'm holding on rather than walking freely."]

Question 2 — The Primary Battle Update

"We said last Sunday that your primary fight this week was [name the specific sin or struggle]. Have you fallen, come close, or held ground since Sunday?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — Fallen / Near-miss / Held ground + one honest sentence of detail. No vague answers accepted. Example: "Near-miss on Tuesday night. Did not fall, but came closer than I'd like to admit and my partner needs to know that."]

Question 3 — The High-Risk Window Report

"You identified three high-risk moments for this week. Have any of them occurred yet? Did your pre-decided response work?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — e.g., "Window 1 happened Tuesday. The pre-decided response worked because I'd already moved the phone. Window 2 hasn't come yet — it's Thursday lunch. Window 3 is this Sunday."]

Question 4 — The Prayer Audit

"How has your prayer life been from Sunday to now? Give me a real number — out of the prayers or devotionals you were supposed to complete, what percentage did you actually complete?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — e.g., "About 70%. I hit every Fajr which is my main goal, but I've rushed through Dhuhr twice and completely missed it once." Or: "Honest answer — maybe 50%. I've been doing it but I've been going through the motions and I know it."]

Question 5 — The Emotional State Check

"What has been your dominant emotional state this week? And has that state made you more or less vulnerable to your primary battle?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — e.g., "Mostly anxious. I have a work review coming up and anxiety is one of my biggest triggers. I'm in a higher-risk state than I was on Sunday."]

Question 6 — The Thing You Don't Want to Say

"Is there something you almost didn't tell me today? Something you were planning to leave out or soften?"

[Note: This question is not optional and cannot be skipped. It exists because accountability partners protect themselves by strategic omission more than by outright lying. Silence in response to this question is also an answer. Give your partner 30 full seconds before accepting "no."]

[SPACE FOR ANSWER]

Question 7 — The Spiritual Win

"Tell me one specific moment from this week where you made a choice that honored God. Not a big thing — the smallest real thing."

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — This question serves two purposes: it builds the habit of noticing spiritual victories, and it prevents the check-in from becoming purely shame-focused. Example: "I was in a conversation where I could have easily joined in some backbiting and I just didn't. I changed the subject. It sounds small but two weeks ago I wouldn't have done it."]

Question 8 — The Body and Sleep Check

"How is your body this week — sleep, food, exercise? This is a spiritual question."

[Note to both partners: Physical depletion is one of the most underacknowledged triggers for spiritual failure. A person running on 5 hours of sleep and skipped meals has a much weaker capacity to resist temptation. This is not an excuse — it is intelligence. Know your body's relationship to your sin.]

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — e.g., "Sleep has been terrible — averaging 5 hours. I know from experience that this makes me about twice as likely to fall on any given night."]

Question 9 — The Wednesday-to-Sunday Forecast

"Looking at the next four days, where do you expect the greatest pressure to come from? Is there a specific moment, event, or emotional trigger you can already see coming?"

[SPACE FOR ANSWER — e.g., "Friday night I'm going to a work event where alcohol will be present and I'll feel social pressure. That's my most vulnerable window between now and Sunday."]

Question 10 — The Partner Request

"What

Niche: Christian or Muslim adults who keep struggling with the same sin and want a faith-based accountability system ·
Format: Template · Generated: June 02, 2026